Lauda, Oia, Santorini

By Isabella Foulger, Co-Founder & Editor

If you're looking for a truly memorable gastronomic Greek treat, Lauda is the one for you. Located in the vibrant clifftop village of Oia, it prides itself on being the oldest restaurant which first opened in 1971. Meander down the narrow stepped pathway, and you will arrive at the poolside restaurant with mesmerising sea views. Romance is the heartbeat here, on arrival expect to be presented with a single red rose amongst other gestures. Waiters wear white linen teamed with trainers, it's where fine dining blends seamlessly with a relaxed al fresco vibe. Opt for one of the extensive tasting menus curated by Emmanuel Renaut, an award-winning chef and the founder of Flocons de Sel, the legendary 3 Michelin Starred French restaurant. Sit back and admire the panoramic views whilst each course is paired with a local wine or colourful mocktail, by the tentative sommelier. An impressive array of amuse bouche sets the tone of what's to follow, served on volcanic rocks, there's virtual olives, mirco-donuts and other surprising delights. There's a huge emphasis on local ingredients with each dish, highlights include the Yellowtail marinated with fennel flowers, Lobster gnocchi and the pistachio tart with fresh zesty lemon. After sunset hilltop towns twinkle peacefully on nearby islands, it's the perfect location for spoiling dinner. laudarestaurant.com/

Hot Tip: dine like royalty by booking the famous "red throne" table, which has the best views for a special occasion.
